INTEREST AT 4 PER CENT

and Banking by Mail

Commencing July 1st the Lamotte County Savings Bank & Trust Co. of Hyde Park, Vt., subject to certain limitations, will pay interest at four per cent. where money remains with the Bank one year or more.

The entire assets of this Bank are kept in Vermont and loaned to Vermonters to foster Vermont enterprises and to develop Vermont industries. This benefits Vermont, and makes for the security of the Bank. It means as near absolute safety of the depositor's money as it is possible to have, a fact fully proven by the other fact that since the organization of the Bank in 1889 it has never lost a dollar by a poor note, nor has it now, so far as known, a single piece of poor or doubtful paper.

The securities of the Bank are at home, where they can be personally examined and passed upon by its officials, having in view not only the material but the moral hazard which is oftentimes the greater hazard surrounding an investment.

Safety of principal rather than high rates of interest has always governed in the investments of this Bank. It is essentially the people's Bank and the people have confidence in its management and its safety. Its assets, together with the liability of the Stockholders, offer a guaranty of more than 20 per cent. of the entire deposits that no depositor shall suffer loss.

Banking by mail, a specialty with this Bank, is not only safe, but easy. Send your address on a postal to F. M. Culver, Treas., or to C. S. Page, President, and you will receive by the first mail valuable information touching the affairs of this Bank.

LACKAWANNA
TRAIN HELD UP

A Dozen Men, Heavily Armed
Flag a Freight

BY WAVING RED LANTERN

Revolvers Check Trainmen—Robbers Rifle the Cars, Pile Plunder on a Wagon, and Drive Off Into the Night.

Paterson, N. J., July 3.—That a train on the Lackawanna railroad was held up by road agents in true western style near Little Falls on Tuesday night became known yesterday when detectives employed by the railroad company sought the assistance of the local police in tracking the bandits. The railroad authorities kept the affair quiet, apparently expecting to be able themselves to run down the robbers.

The engineer of a freight train saw a light ahead on the road, and soon made out a man swinging a lantern frantically as if to give warning of danger ahead. The engineer reversed his lever and whistled for brakes, and the train was quickly brought to a standstill.

When the conductor and brakeman jumped out to see what the trouble was they found themselves looking into the barrels of seven-shotguns, and were ordered to hold up their hands by the men behind the guns. The highwaymen numbered half a dozen and were all heavily armed.

While one of the highwaymen covered the engineer and firemen, and two others kept the conductor and brakeman under guard, the rest of the band broke into the freight cars and took what booty they could find. Just how much loot was taken has not yet been made known.

The robbers had a horse and wagon, and into this they piled their plunder. Then, after a warning to the trainmen not to make a move for at least five minutes, they scrambled up on top of their load and drove away.

The hold-up occurred at a very lonely part of the road, and the trainmen, all of whom were unarmed, were unable to get assistance until the robbers had got such a start that they were able to avoid capture.

The theory of the railroad detectives and the police here is that the bandits had planned to stop a fast passenger express train. It is believed that the holding up of the freight was a mistake, and this idea is borne out by the fact that some of the bandits were heard by the trainmen to express disappointment at the kind of booty obtained.

The police here have promised to do what they could to aid the railroad detectives, but it is thought that the only possible way now to get a clue to the robbers is to discover how the stolen property was disposed of.

"Mr. Dooley" on Taft.

In the July American Magazine "Mr. Dooley" writes of the presidential candidates. Of Taft he says:

"His role position in the cabinet is Official Jollyer. He's th' Happy Hand. When there's a ruction anywhere Taft starts out an' cleans it up. A man goes into th' White House with a letter from James J. Hill. There's a sound in breakin' glass an' furniture, an' th' visitor is fired out in a window. Where does he fall? Into Taft's waitin' arms. 'Where ar' ye goin', frind?' says Taft. 'To a hardware store to buy me a gun,' says the man. 'I have another letter in me pocket from Halton Rogers,' he says. 'Ah, set here awhile,' says Taft, pullin' him into a chair. 'Have a good see-gar. Put wan into yer pocket to smoke afther supper. Isn't it a fine day, ain't it? I've got a conundrum I want to tell ye! Don't mind th' little fellow inside. It's his fun. Why, yesterday, he threw a lighted lamp at me an' I'm his best frind!' An' th' man goes back to Herkimer county and shows th' place where Roosevelt hit him."

IRRESISTIBLE SLEEP.

An Experience in the Fiery Cold of Tierra del Fuego.

"Whoever sits down," said Dr. Solander to his company among the hills of Tierra del Fuego, "will sleep, and whoever sleeps will wake no more."

The brave doctor and his men had tramped a considerable distance through the swamps, when the weather became suddenly colder and fierce blasts of wind drove the snow before it. In a short time the cold became so intense as to cause the most oppressive drowsiness. Dr. Solander was the first to find the inclination to sleep, and he insisted upon lying down. In vain his companions entreated and remonstrated. He lay down, and when told that he would inevitably freeze to death answered that he desired nothing more than to lie down and die. One of the black servants lay down also. Solander declared himself willing to go on, but begged to be allowed to sleep first, and in a few moments the two men were in a profound sleep.

Soon after, those who had been sent forward to kindle a fire returned with the welcome news that the fire awaited them at a short distance. The men happily succeeded in awakening Solander, who, although he had not been asleep five minutes, had almost lost the use of his limbs, and the flesh was so shrunken that his shoes fell from his feet. It was with much urging and assistance that he was persuaded to go on, but all attempts to arouse the black man were futile, and he was left to die.

VANISHING TROUSERS.

A Simple Trick Which May or May Not Be Humorous.

This is a simple trick, and every married woman can perform it, but it requires the assistance of a confederate with a big bag of shining tinware on his back.

First get a husband with an extra pair of slightly worn trousers in his wardrobe; then have the confederate, the man with the bag of tinware, come to the back door and knock gently. The wife must then peep out in a frightened way, and immediately the man with the tinware tells a tale that resembles an advertisement. The wife stops to think a few minutes. Suddenly she must rush to the wardrobe, but only after the man rattles the brilliant tinware to arouse her. The wife must walk back to the man again with the trousers. The man must take them and hand the wife a few tin pans. All the while the man with the tinware must smile happily. At last the transaction is completed, and presto change! the husband's trousers have disappeared and in their place appears some tinware on the kitchen table. This trick is very novel and will amuse the husband greatly. The trick should not be performed while the husband is in bed unless he has an extra pair of trousers.—F. P. Pitzer in Judge.

Another Nuisance.

It was the first time he was being married, and he was usually a little nervous and upset, but he managed to say "Yes" all right and to keep time to Mendelssohn, sailing down the aisle, and to sign his name in the register without making more than a dozen blots.

He thought then that it was finished, but when they got to the church door they found it was raining.

"Confound it!" he cried, putting up his umbrella. "Another nuisance now!" And then, though he cannot guess why, the people around all laughed, and his mother-in-law bridled and his wife refused to speak.—London Answers.

Shock to the Waiter.

There was a terrible commotion in the kitchen of the cafe. They could see it through the swinging doors. Some one went to investigate.

"What is it?" they asked when he had returned.

"A waiter fainting," he answered as he took his seat. "They are slapping him with wet towels, trying to bring him to. Did you see that woman who just left? She was the cause. She gave him a quarter tip."—New York Press.

Dear to Him.

"Before we were married you called me 'darling.' Now you seem content to call me 'dear.'"

"You weren't so dear to me before marriage as you are now. Your father paid your bills."—Houston Post.
